All the data published in the Climate Data Store as part of the C3S seasonal forecast multi-system may be used and redistributed without restrictions.

For data originating from non-European modelling centres (whose contributions to C3S are in-kind), the following additional terms and conditions apply:

* The original source of the dataset should be duly acknowledged when it is used in scientific or technical papers, publications, press releases or other communications regarding the data.

* The originating centres do not guarantee the continuity of service, or the overall quality of service and content of information.

* The originating centres assume no liability or responsibility for any problem arising from the access to information or its use.
